ROBBERS KNEW THREE WOMEN HAD MONEY

Waylaid Stage and Took It. Escape in Rough Mogollon Country.

Silver City, N. M., July 26.—The robbers who held up Merriette mail stage, five miles this side of Mogollon, relieved three women passengers of $487 in cash, a gold bracelet and $150 worth of jewelry. The three passengers were seated on the back seat of the stage. One other passenger, Leo Higdon, stenographer for the Socorro Mines company, was not molested. None of the mail sacks or packages were taken or opened. The names of the three women are Sara Romero, Helen Blanchard and Stella Miller. They had been in the town of Mogollon for several months and had accumulated considerable money. The robbers evidently knew this. The robbers proceeded in a most systematic manner. The taller of the two men held the horses and kept the stage driver and Mr. Higdon covered with a gun, while the smaller of the two took the mail sacks or packages were taken or opened. The names of the three women are Sara Romero, Helen Blanchard and Stella Miller. They had been in the town of Mogollon for several months and had accumulated considerable money. The robbers evidently knew $322 and that of Helen Blanchard $225. Other valuables were taken, after which the highwaymen disappeared in the darkness of the mountainous country. The country where the holdup was made is very rough.

Colorado to Fight Mining Laws.

Denver, Colo., July 29.—Charging that the conservation bills known as senate bills Nos. 5484 and 5486 to 5492, inclusive, introduced at the last session of congress, will if adopted, seriously retard western mining development, and add to the "already heavy burdens" of mining men, Colorado mining men are planning a strenuous fight against these measures at the annual session of the mining congress, to be held in Los Angeles during the week beginning September 26.

Black Hand Victim.

Salt Lake, Utah, July 29.—That Leonardo Piro was shot down by a mysterious stranger in a black mask because he had failed in his obligation to a secret society, is the conviction that is growing upon the officers detailed to investigate the murder in a West First South street saloon early yesterday morning. Piro's bride of five months attributed the crime to one of her former admirers, but her theory has been disproved. In Italian circles it is generally believed that Piro was associated with an Italian society in Newark, N. J., and that he came to Utah five years ago to evade its dictates.

Avoiding Alaskan Politics.

Juneau, Alaska, July 30.—U. S. attorney general Wickersham and secretary of commerce and labor Nagel are carefully avoiding any action that would put them in the light of taking part in the bitter political fight that is being waged by the so-called Guggenheim and anti-Guggenheim factions in Alaska. At Ketchikan Friday, a citizens committee headed by the mayor, sought an audience with the cabinet officers, who declined to see them. The committee had prepared a complaint to the visitors of Alaska's alleged wrongs.

LURE OF FAKE DRAMATIC SCHOOL

HENRIETTA CROSMAN

Henrietta Crosman Warns Stage-Struck Young Women and Men in Hampton's Magazine.

That, in this country, there are innumerable fake dramatic schools which fatten upon ignorant and simple stage-struck youth, causing the ruin of hundreds and driving many to suicide, is the revelation made by Miss Henrietta Crosman, the noted actress, in an article in the August number of Hampton's Magazine.

Miss Crosman, before exposing the methods of the pseudo and fake schools, says:

"Inasmuch as I myself began on the stage and not in a dramatic school, I admit I am prejudiced in favor of real stage work for a beginner. I believe in going up in balloons to learn ballooning; it may break your neck, but, then, there is something actual, and decisive even, in a broken neck. With equal frankness, however, I will admit that some of the best stars on the American stage today came out of the good dramatic schools in New York, Chicago and Boston; and that, therefore, a good word must be said for some of these schools and their systems."

"The trouble is, most candidates for stage education are beginners; and the inevitable and pathetic quality of a beginner is that he doesn't know anything about the subject threatened."

"Instead of going on the stage, thousands of stage-struck youth are lured to the schools of made-to-order emotion and then to shattered ambition."

"I have watched the operations of these stage cyphers for years," says Miss Crosman, "and am firmly of the opinion that the great bulk of them—always excepting the worthy few—are undoubtedly pernicious in their influence and are designed to take money from the silly and ambitious but impossible amateur. If the dramatic schools encouraged only people who had real talent, they would have very few pupils; but I have yet to hear of an applicant to a dramatic school being refused on the ground that he or she had no natural gifts."

Appeal to Girls.

Miss Crosman's words have the weight of long experience and wisdom. She concludes her article in Hampton's with an appeal every parent and stage ambitious young person should read.

"Girls," she says, "do you feel that you must go on the stage? Are you sure that years from now you will not be a total failure as an actress and as a woman? For the odds are great that if you are not successful on the stage you yourself will follow the path that so many others have tread. Necessity is a difficult thing to face, and necessity makes many a woman do a lot of things she would not think of doing if there were any other way to face the condition that confronts her after failure. I could tell you cases of girls by the score, girls I myself have seen gradually change from their simple country ways to an acceptance of the mean licentiousness of the big cities, after reaping the inevitable fruit of original incompetence. The pity of it is that all this annual contribution of bright-eyed, ambitious young womanhood to failure has not advanced the stage one bit, has not added one percent of worthy acting to the annals of the stage."

"Want you to understand that to one with genuine talent—and they are comparatively few—the stage is just as safe as a business office. But the stage attracts more young women, without an iota of talent, than the business office. It is tempting to consider the legion of young people absolutely unfitted for stage success, who after trying in vain sink to the easiest and briefest way of making a living."

BONUS OFFERED FOR MEXICO RAILROAD

State of Chihuahua Wants Road to Its Capital from Coahuila.

Chihuahua, Mex., July 30.—The legislature of the state of Chihuahua has voted a subsidy of 400,000 pesos to encourage the building of the projected railroad of Coahuila to this city, a distance of about 700 kilometers. The conditions under which the bonus is to be given are substantially that the company build the portion of the road in this state, about 250 kilometers, within five years.

The state of Coahuila agreed some time ago to give this road a subsidy which is said to be 5000 pesos per kilometer, but must not exceed 2,000,000 pesos. The length of the line in that state will probably be a little over 400 kilometers.

coal companies operating in the state of Coahuila to get a direct line into this section and markets. The concession for the road was granted to Eduardo Hartman, of Durango, who is personally heavily interested in Coahuila coal mines.

The line for the road has never been finally located, but as it will run through an easy country this can be done quickly. Bridging the Conchos river at or near Julimes, Chih., will probably be the feat of construction on the entire route. Such a road will open up an entirely new country, not only used for grazing, but has agricultural possibilities.

It is known that there is at least one vast deposit of iron of splendid grade which is located practically on the line where it will cross the Chihuahua-Coahuila line. Undoubtedly the mountains contain deposits of lead, silver and zinc ores.

The line of this projected road was inspected about two years ago by Dr. R. H. Bryant, chief engineer of the Mexico Northwestern Railway company with a party of hydraulic engineers and agricultural experts.
